EDUCATION

Doctor of Philosophy: Evolutionary Psychology, Quantitative Methods Emphasis (Anticipated: May 2028)

The University of New Mexico (UNM), Albuquerque, NM

Advisor: Geoffrey Miller

Prospective Dissertation Focus:

My anticipated dissertation will incorporate theoretical developments and empirical tests of The Mating Shadow Theory of Cross-Sex Friendship (Dobson, in prep). The theory is currently verbal; it argues that, based on the logic of sexual selection, cross-sex friendships can never evolve to be akin to same-sex friendships. In a series of three papers, I will formalize and test this theory. First, a mathematical model of the evolution of cross-sex friendship will delineate specific, risky (i.e., unlikely to hold unless the theory is true) predictions. Second, using 20+ years of longitudinal data from the Kibale Chimpanzee project, key predictions of the theory will be tested within chimpanzees. Third, existing data and newly collected human data will be analyzed to provide key tests of the theory within humans. If supported, these tests would provide strong evidence for the ways that evolution has constrained human cognition.

Master of Science: Evolutionary Psychology (December 2024)

The University of New Mexico, Albuquerque, NM

Master's Thesis: Psychometric Exploration of the Five Love Languages

Conducted exploratory and confirmatory factor analyses to evaluate the latent structure and measurement validity of the Five Love Languages framework. I found evidence for a five factor solution with factors that roughly corresponded to Chapman's framework, and an additional pleasing me sexually factor.

Bachelor of Science: Psychology, Philosophy minor (December 2022)

The University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire (UWEC), Eau Claire, WI

Honors Thesis: Jealousy in Opposite-Sex Friendships: The Threat of Being Replaced

GRANTS AND AWARDS

University of New Mexico

Best Experimental Graduate Student Paper, 2026 – $300.00

Psychology department award received for paper titled Progesterone and negative emotionality across and between ovulatory cycles: A study of romantically involved women.

Behavior Genetics Association

Graduate Student Travel Award, 2026 – $330.00

For presentation at the Behavior Genetics Association annual research conference

Institute of Mental Chronometry

Graduate Student Travel Award, 2025 – $1,000.00

For presentation at the International Society for Intelligence Research annual research conference

University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire Office of Research and Sponsored Programs

Summer Research Grant, 2022 – $1200.00

Student research supervised by Dr. April Bleske-Rechek

The University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire Office of Research and Sponsored Programs

Student Travel Award, 2022 – $650.00

VISITING RESEARCH APPOINTMENTS

University of Minnesota – Minnesota Center for Twin and Family Research

Visiting Graduate Researcher (Behavior Genetics)

Fall 2026 – Spring 2027 (remote)

Fall 2025 – Summer 2026 (in-person)

Primary Mentor: Matt McGue, Ph.D.

Conducting genetically informed analyses using adoption and twin datasets to examine parent-child relationship quality and adolescent sexual behavior. Training in quantitative behavior genetic modeling and within-family analytic designs.

Murdoch University (Perth, Australia)

Visiting Graduate Researcher, Evolution and Social Cognition Lab

January 2026

Host: David M.G. Lewis, Ph.D.

Collaborative research on evolutionary models of same- and cross-sex friendship.

TEACHING EXPERIENCE

University of New Mexico

Instructor of Record – Statistical Principles (Online), Summer 2025, 2026

Laboratory Instructor – Advanced Statistics (Graduate Core Course), 2025

RESEARCH DATA MANAGEMENT & PREPARATION

Kibale Chimpanzee Project (Supervised by Co-Director, Martin Muller, Ph.D.)

University of New Mexico, 2026-Present

Helped manage intensive longitudinal data of Chimpanzees across 20+ years of behavioral observations.

Relationship Dynamics: Endocrinology and Behavior (NSF funded; PI: Steven Gangestad, Ph.D.; Co-PI: Melissa Emery Thompson, Ph.D)

University of New Mexico, 2024-2025

Developed transparent and reproducible data preprocessing workflows in R and Python for three intensive longitudinal studies tracking endocrine and behavioral dynamics across the menstrual cycle.

ABQ Treat Clinical Research Project (NIH-funded; Co-PIs: Barbara McCrady, Ph.D., Katie Witkiewitz, Ph.D., & Eric Claus, Ph.D.)

University of New Mexico, 2024

Developed reproducible, version-controlled data-cleaning variable harmonization, and quality-control pipelines in R and GitHub for a large longitudinal clinical trial dataset.
